DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Craig house is located in the village of Beaver Creek on old route 66, about 1/2 mile south of its junction with I-70 in Washington County, Maryland. It is built into a rise of ground with its front facing east.

The structure is a four-bay, two-story brick dwelling with dark green and white trim. A two-bay, one-and-a-half story el extends to the rear of the main section. The walls are set on limestone foundations which become high enough at the north side of the house to allow numerous courses of stretchers between header rows. Flat brick arches, the height of one brick, are present over window and door openings.

The windows appears to have been located symmetrically in the facade. At the first floor level the windows are elongated nearly to the length of the main door. These windows contain single-pane, double-hung sashes. Other windows have six-over-six light double-hung sashes held within narrow frames. The window above the front door has been partially enclosed with glass brick to accommodate an upstairs bath.

The main entrance is located in the second bay from the south end of the facade. The doorway is quite plain in its design topped with a four-light transom and flanked with paneled jambs. The entrance opens into a spacious stair hall.

A one-story Victorian period porch extends along the length of the facade. It is supported by turned posts with decorative carved brackets.

Brick chimneys are located inside each gable end and the roof of the el. The roof is covered with grey asphalt shingles and extends beyond the end walls of the house. The eaves are finished with a simple cornice board.

The 1-1/2 story wing extending to the rear contains a large service fireplace. Wear on the interior floor at the first bay from the north end of the house may indicate a door at that location and possibly another use for the structure. Further examination is necessary to determine whether another door existed and whether it was original.

Although altered, the house is in good condition. It stands on a tract containing 2-1/4 acres of land.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The area of significance of this house is its architecture. Built in a four-bay plan with an off-center front door, it is representative of a significant architectural group in Washington County. Although this example dates from the mid 19th century, many of the County's earliest remaining houses follow the four-bay plan.
